Not illustrated. 1918 Excerpt: . . . on the out-voyage and homeward bound, and the very basis of business for our merchant marine is to build new trade for ourselves by helping other nations increase their production and finding them new markets. Before the war Great Britain and America were commercially asleep. The United States had no merchant marine on the ocean and could neither develop her own trade in manufactured goods nor serve other nations by improving their markets for raw materials. Great Britain had her wonderful empire, but permitted Germany to develop many of its resources through German ships and German scientific production. Germany overreached herself because her philosophy of trade and shipping was wrong--based upon selfish exploitation and one-sided dealing. England and America have both learned their lessons. They are now waking to the possibilities in a new world of international service. He profits most who serves most. One nation...
