The very cheap price at which schools can now get the one-inch map of Britain puts the local sheet within the reach of every schoolboy in the country. The Board of Agriculture deserves the thanks of all Englishmen for the new regulations which permit this. In geographical literature and cartography the advance is conspicuous. The Exhibition downstairs has not been open long enough to justify me in attempting any selection or criticism, but we have all appreciated the volumes of Dr. Mill and Dr. Keltie and Mr. Chisholm. Our Society's organ, The Geographical Teacher, has entered on what I trust may prove a successful career. Its success must depend, however, on the support it receives from readers and advertisers. It is desirable that every member of the Association should do...
