Excerpt from Liberty and Lincoln: Address Before the Young Republican Club, of Germantown These people were loyal to government, having an innate love of peace and a deep respect for law, but they were most jealous of their rights, and most impatient under any form of usurpation. Affected by the spirit of the age, they were, however, often intolerant of the religious and political opinions of others. The Colonies were settled when the English people, themselves, were endeavoring to establish in their government the principles, of liberty. It was the period of the long struggle between the people on one side and absolutism on the other. In the language of Thierry, it was neither Charles Stuart nor Oliver Cromwell who was concerned in the revolution of England; it was the English nation and liberty; it was a contest between the Common Right of the People and the Divine Right of Kings. It was, as Guizot strongly states the collision of the two great facts, to which in the course of the Sixteenth Century, all the civilization of primitive Europe tended - monarchy on the one hand and free inquiry on the other. The influence of this struggle left a deep impress on the mind and thought of the new world. Prior to the American revolution, there were three forms of government in the Colonies, Royal, Charter and Proprietary, and the battle for liberty was early begun, against the exercise, under these forms, of arbitrary or unreasonable power. It was in Virginia, that the first struggle was made, when the people in 1635 deposed Sir John Harvey the royal Governor, and sent him home to England, much to the disgust of King...
